

Can you afford to give one weekend to your teenagers which could radically change their lives – for the better?

Can you afford not to?

With the credit crunch, a massive dearth of jobs and myriad technological distractions, today's teenagers face challenges much tougher than previous generations.

Our job as parents is to guide our teens through this jungle, but as we all know, we're often the last people to whom they'll turn.

It's for exactly this reason that HeroPath has been formed:

To provide an independent set of experienced voices to listen and interpret teenagers' concerns – and moreover acquaint them with their unique skilfulness to lead them towards lives of genuine happiness and success.

The HeroPath approach is conveyed in weekend programmes, which empower teenagers to:

- Best make the decisions that will impact the rest of their lives
- Perform flawlessly under immense pressure
- Create truly deep and lasting authentic relationships

And crucially, we give them a real sense of their personal identity and worth. In turn, this leads to developing their interests and passions, which gives them an undoubted, enthusiastic edge in the modern world, whether to pursue a specific career or a personal passion.

To find out more and to book for the next Heropath weekend, visit or contact:

W: www.HeroPath.co.uk

T: Des Barry, Founder HeroPath UK: 07768 277929

E: desbarry@heropath.co.uk

Or simply complete the enrolment form attached to this email.

Next HeroPath weekends:

11-13 September and 20-22 November 2009

Friday 7:30-10pm, Saturday 10am-10pm, Sunday 10am-5pm

Venue: Harpenden House Hotel, Harpenden, AL5 1PE – see here