

On Wednesday 26 October 2011, starting at 7.30pm,

RAISING TEENS WHO THRIVE IN AN UNSTABLE WORLD – A HEROPATH PERSPECTIVE

In these difficult times, and amidst the screaming ever present distractions of a largely cynical self-absorbed pop-culture and media, raising youth who possess the essential focus, work ethic and resilience they'll need to be successful in life, has never been more challenging.

This Wednesday, we will be offering a very special presentation for parents of today's teens who are looking to give their son or daughter a legitimate, lasting edge in these difficult times. This is something two of my sons (Cameron and Rew) have attended...and carries my full endorsement.

Our presenter, Jeffrey Leiken, is the Founder of Evolution Mentoring International and co-Founder of HeroPath For Teens. He specializes in using his unique form of mentoring to train teens and young adults to adopt a fulfilling way of life that ensures they do what they love, share their life with people whom they love and grow into moral, contributing adults who truly live without regrets. Applying what he teaches they grow into young adults who remain positive, inspired and engaged, even in a peer and popular culture that is often anything but that.

Jeff will be sharing an empowering message about how to teach your teens not just to be opportunity seekers, but to learn how to create opportunities where none exist. He'll offer a compelling message as to why teaching this attitude and skill-set is the most critical thing we can be teaching them in today's world.

This presentation will include numerous examples, plus an introduction to the HeroPath For Teens program. There will be ample time for Q&A. This is a ONE NIGHT ONLY event. Jeffrey is in the UK to run a program this weekend October 28-30th.
